history of American slavery through voice readings from a compilation narrative of ex-slaves. Chronicling the slave experience on a very intimate level, this audio production of Lester's 1968 work challenges the emotional and moral boundaries of listeners with first-person accounts of slavery - incorporating original language and language patterns as written by abolitionists, historians, and slaves themselves over the past 200 years. This program was originally produced in the 1980's by Ahna Armour for the KPFK radio series Morning Reading, and is now broadcast again for the first time in nearly thirty years. Archive 02-16-2012

1500: Progressive Spirit: Podcaster's website ; Underwriter website Professor of Philosophy at Columbia, Phillip Kitcher, talks with host John Shuck about how if human beings hope to survive the looming climate catastrophes, we will need to talk it out, one to one, in families, neighborhoods, and social gatherings. The power of grassroots democracy is the theme in the latest book he co-wrote with MIT philosopher Evelyn Fox-Keller, "The Seasons Alter: How to Save the Planet in Six Acts." Matt Alford along with Tom Secker have exposed new evidence that the national security state led by the Pentagon and the CIA have forced script changes on over 800 Hollywood movies and over a thousand network television shows to cover-up crimes and to manipulate US citizens. The authors show that Hollywood and Washington are part of a system that is hard-wired to encourage American global supremacy and frequently the use of state violence. They document it all in their new book, "National Security Cinema: The Shocking New Evidence of Government Control in Hollywood." Archive 11-17-2017

Part one is a focus on outreach efforts that intend to bring some peace and safety to immigrants whose futures have become tangled up in the United States evolving immigration stance. First we'll hear the story of Jose Torres who, in the fall of 2017, became the first person in New Orleans to take sanctuary in a church to avoid deportation. Jose is a community leader with the Congress of Day Laborers, a group of immigrant workers and families who helped to rebuild the city after Hurricane Katrina. Producer Sarah Holtz spoke with Jose at his place of sanctuary, First Grace Methodist Church. Then Suzanne Kryder speaks with Justin Remer-Thamert, director of the New Mexico Faith Coalition For Immigrant Justice, who recently received the Parliament of the World's Religions Justice Award. Justin also offers some ideas about bringing opposing sides of the immigration debate closer together. Finally, Suzanne visits with Bawa Jain, the Secretary-General of The Millennium World Peace Summit of Religious and Spiritual Leaders that opened at the United Nations in August 2000 with the intent to find ways that the worldwide religious and spiritual communities can work together as interfaith allies with the United Nations on specific peace, poverty and environmental initiatives. Archive 04-15-2019
